

Pierpaolo Battigalli is a theoretical economist specialized in the epistemic and learning foundations of game theory, and in psychological game theory. He was born in Milan in 1961. He studied Economics and Social Sciences at Bocconi University, Milan, where he graduated in 1987 with a thesis on game theory. He was awarded an MSc in Econometrics and Mathematical Economics in 1989 at the London School of Economics and continued with doctoral studies in economics in Milan. He was awarded the PhD in Economics in 1992 with a monographic dissertation on the foundations of game theory. He worked as Assistant Professor at the Polytechnic of Milan (1992-94) and Princeton University (1994-98), as professor at the European University Institute (1998-2000), and finally returned to the alma mater as full professor. At Bocconi University he served as Director of the PhD program in Economics, Dean of the PhD School, and Head of the Department of Decision Sciences. He served as Associate Editor of Econometrica, Theoretical Economics, and the International Journal of Game Theory, and he is currently (Co)Editor of the Journal of Economic Theory and Associate Editor of Games and Economic Behavior. He was elected Fellow of the Econometric Society, Fellow of the Game Theory Society, and Economic Theory Fellow.