Peter A. Bamberger (PhD Cornell University) is the Domberger Professor of Management at Tel Aviv University’s Coller School of Management, and Research Director of the Cornell ILR School’s Smithers Institute. His research examines pay communication and compensation strategy, pro-social behavior, occupational health psychology, and the cognitive implications of discrete workplace events. Author of several books including Human Resource Strategy (Sage, 2000; Routledge, 2014), Mutual Aid and Union Renewal (Cornell, 2001), and Exposing Pay: How Pay Transparency and Disclosure Impacts Employees, Employers and the Societies in Which We Live (Oxford, forthcoming), Bamberger has published over 100 referred journal articles in such journals as AMJ, ASQ and JAP. An elected fellow of SIOP and the Academy of Management, he served as an associate editor of the AMJ, founding associate editor and then editor-in-chief of Academy of Management Discoveries (2012-2020). He currently serves as the Vice-President Elect of the Academy of Management.
